DECATUR, ILLINOIS.

Entered at the Post Office at Decatur, Illinois, second class mail matter.

MONDAY EVE., FEB. 10, 1890.

Mr. HORACE BOES, of Iowa, is still waiting for his job to begin.

EX-SPEAKER RANDALL, who has been in a condition of health for a week past calculated to alarm his friends and family, is improved somewhat this week, and his friends are much encouraged.

SENATOR FARWELL has offered to become one of the bondsmen of Collector Clark thus testifying in a very decided and practical way his belief that the President made a good appointment.

SPEAKER REED can console himself with the reflection that the same men who are now scheming about a tyrant need to apply still more offsets against Abraham Lincoln under like circumstances.

EVERYBODY is pleased with the proposed rules for the House except those whose efforts to block legislation will be thwarted by the rules, and they have no rights in this matter which the majority are bound to respect.

These are troublous times for the Mormons. The United States Supreme Court has dealt them a crushing blow, and now the Gentiles threaten to obtain control of Salt Lake City at the approaching municipal election.

The municipal election at Salt Lake City is in progress to day. A full complement of city officers, mayor and aldermen, is to be chosen, and feeling is running high. The issue is Mormonism against Liberalism, and the prospect for the latter is really encouraging.

The Postmaster General has offered twelve gold medals to be competed for by the clerks in the Railway Mail Service, one for the clerk in each of the eleven divisions who has the best general record and one to the clerk who makes the best record for rapid distribution. The competition for these badges of honor cannot fail to have a marked effect in improving the efficiency of the service.

The Cliff-Dwellers.

Lieutenant Schwarts, the famous Arctic explorer, arrived in Chicago on Saturday having in charge eleven Tchumani Indians, natives of the Sierra Madre Mountains of Mexico. They belong to the ancient cave or cliff-dwellers, and are the first of their race which have ever been seen outside of their native wilds. Indeed, so little known are they that the race has been by many supposed to be extinct, although the Mexicans alleges that there are still some 3000 of them in Mexico. When Lieutenant Schwarts started with his find he had sixteen of the race, but five of them "got away." They were scared off by various new things that are so wonderful to them—some of them when they first beheld a railroad train and others when they first beheld the electric lights. Among the band was a baby a year old accompanied by its father, and another, and it was accepted as an evidence of the common origin of the race that the younger cried as lustily when he had his face washed as ever pale-faced baby did in resenting the same sort of familiarity. The lieutenant proposes to use them to illustrate his lectures on anthropology, and has no doubt that they belong to the now extinct race of cliff-dwellers of Arizona. The discovery marks a new and interest epoch in the history of the race.

After all the disturbance in North Dakota concerning the expected passage of the bill to legalize lottery in that state, it is not likely that it will escape the governor's veto, and speculation is ripe as to what the legislature will be prone to do in that event. A press dispatch from Bismarck alleges that the bill will be certainly defeated, and this seems to be probable. The timer of North Dakota farmers is not likely to be tried by a scheme to legalize gambling. A political revolution would be sure to result from an attempt to introduce Louisiana's civilization in the lettuce of Fargo. It is the wrong sort of a vote for that kind of a patent way of making money.

The Democracy are howling. They have secured a copy of the Helena (Mont.) Journal, which is publishing a new primer for use in the schools of the new state, from which we make the following extract:

THE DEMOCRATIC

The Democrat is a rare bird in most northern countries, his constitution and temperament being such that he is easily satisfied with a minimum of life. Nevertheless, he has been successfully transplanted, and the harder he tries to get back to his old home, the more he fails. The Democrats of the Valley Republic and other Statesmen of the Valley Republic, it is to be thought, His descent from Jefferson Davis is the cause of his failure. He could not be obtained by a bribe as long as the Northern Pacific railroad. The Democratic has a strong taste for liquor and soap. The man who is fit for him is fit for the world. The Southern species is remarkable for its strong taste for liquor and soap. The man who is fit for him is fit for the world.

It is said that Duckworth has never assumed his duties as postmaster, and that the man he replaced—a Democrat—and his friends determined that he never should do so. On one occasion a coffin bearing the inscription "Radicals Must Die" was placed upon the porch of Duckworth's house. The statements of Duckworth are corroborated by letters received at the Department from prominent citizens. It is stated that the violence reported will be resisted if the circumstances justify the action. This course was determined upon by Mr. Wanamaker, after consultation with the President and First Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson.

A New Rival for Cotton.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Botanist Porte, of the Department of Agriculture, is of opinion that a process has been discovered by which the ramie plant can be made into cloth at such moderate cost that it will soon become a dangerous rival to cotton. "About a month ago," said Mr. Porte, in conversation on this subject, "information reached this Department that Mr. Thomas Mabbett, a Providence manufacturer had succeeded in doing with ramie what hundreds, I might say thousands, had tried and failed to do—that is, he had at small cost woven the fiber into cloth. The ramie fiber which he had thus succeeded in weaving had been prepared by a process discovered by Mr. Charles Topham, a chemist of Salem, Mass. Mr. Topham by a secret formula had turned the fiber into a substance for weaving. Mr. Topham it seems, had been experimenting with ramie, like a great many other men, and only succeeded after numerous failures."

"I was ordered by the Department to go to New England and investigate the discoveries of Messrs. Mabbett and Topham. I did so, and what I saw has convinced me that the problem of the utilization of ramie has at last been satisfactorily solved."

Congressional Forecast.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The Senate will try to dispose of the Blair Educational bill during the coming week. Mr. Blair, who occupied the afternoon of Wednesday and Thursday last, will resume his remarks to-day, and probably conclude them before the Senate adjourns. A number of Senators have signified their intention of speaking on this measure before a vote is taken among them. Senators Hoar, Evans, Plumb, Stanford, Pugh and George Edmunds and Reagan are also expected to speak. The enemies of the Blair bill in the Senate have been busy poring over the new Senators, and they claim that the bill will be rejected. It has always passed the Senate before.

Senator Platt will urge the Oklahoma bill during the morning hours, and it will doubtless be passed and sent to the House in a few days. The urgent need of this legislation has been impressed on the members of the House, and at the earliest opportunity the bill will be taken up and passed on them.

"MATCH-SAFE" HATHAWAY DEAD.

Crazy for 23 Years, He Expires of La Grippe.

Thomas Hathaway, once a prosperous citizen of Decatur, died of la grippe at the Macon county poor farm on Saturday night, Feb. 8, at 10 o'clock, aged 63 years. The deceased was better known as "Match-Safe" Hathaway, and his affliction dated back to the time when he invented a match-safe which was the subject of prolonged litigation in the courts. Hathaway was once the owner of the Hathaway House, which stood on the site of Commercial Block on East Eldorado street, a large frame structure which was destroyed by fire. In the winter of 1867 he became deranged on the subject of spiritualism, and after going into the First Methodist church on a Sunday morning and creating a sensation by expounding the doctrine of spiritualism, he was taken in custody. He became very violent. February 11, 1867, he was adjudged insane in the county court. O. F. Parker, J. N. Bills, Joseph King, Silas Packard, J. A. Rossell and J. J. Jones serving on the jury. The verdict was that Hathaway was a nonconformist on spiritualism. He was at the state asylum at Jacksonville for a number of years, and was returned to Macon county as incurable. He remained at the county hospital for several years, and was taken to Kankakee, where he was kept until January 16, of the present year, when he was brought back to give place to Myron W. Tinkler. Physically the deceased was very weak, caused by his 23 years of confinement. Skilled treatment could not restore his reason. He never gave any signs of improvement mentally. Since his return to this county, he contracted a severe attack of la grippe, and passed away Saturday night. The body was placed in the grave Sunday at the farm. The deceased leaves a widow but her address is unknown. At the time he went crazy he resided at the corner of East William and Jackson streets. With his affliction and confinement, all interest in the match safe enterprise died out and but little has ever been heard of the invention except in connection with Hathaway and his condition.

IDA GREEN.

This morning at 6 o'clock Ida Green, aged 23 years, died of a complication of diseases at the poor farm. Her mother was an inmate of the poor house 23 years ago, when Harry Wait was the steward, and there Ida was born. She had homes in good families since reaching girlhood, but finally went to the bad and died where she was born.

A Dog's Friends.

Did the reader ever see a dog perform the ceremony of introducing a human friend? The writer has himself seen the thing done in a way, but never, perhaps, so plainly and prettily as a friend of his has lately witnessed it; the friend himself being the introduced "party." His friend—call him Mr. J.—lives in Roxbury. For a near neighbor he has a man who keeps a carriage and also a fine setter dog. Mr. J. does not enjoy the acquaintance of the neighbor, but he has come to be on excellent terms of friendship with the dog.

Every day Mr. J.—salties forth at about the same hour. Every day he meets the dog whose salutations have gradually passed from mere friendly formalities to affectionate greetings. Yesterday as Mr. J.—came out of his house, he found the dog—whom always, when the carriage starts, goes circling about the horse's head, barking with joy—waiting for him. The carriage, with the horses attached, stood waiting for its occupant. The dog at once came bounding up to J.—, and then went bounding back to the horse. He licked the horse on the nose, and came back to J.— again, and again returned to the horse, evidently laboring under the stress of something that he wanted to say or do.

It was quite plain, in fact, that he wanted his human friend to take notice of his equine friend; he was doing his best to introduce the man to the horse, and make them friends too. So J.—, whose big heart can include horses as well as dogs, yielded to the dog's earnest solicitations; he went up to the horse and patted its head and rubbed its nose. And then the dog's satisfaction and gaiety were simply inexpressible. He gyrated about until it seemed as if he were in danger of swallowing his own tail; and his affection, both for the man and for the horse, was plainly greatly increased by the consciousness that they now knew each other.—Boston Transcript.

A COURTEOUS PRINCE.

"Do not be afraid, Louis," said the Empress Eugenie, holding her son in her arms.

"I am not, mamma," answered the boy of 11; "but have not forgotten that my mother is Napoleon."

The cutter in which the empress and her son were being conveyed at night from a steamer had struck a rock, and the waves were dashing over it at the time this conversation took place.

The young prince, who afterward lost his life in the war between the English and the Zulus, had one trait not common to children—he treated his playmates and all who served him with marked courtesy. The favorite companion of his sports was Louis Conneau, the son of the emperor's physician. They were daily together, and many storms ruffled their intercourse.

One day, when there was to be a state dinner at the Tuilleries, at which the prince was not to appear, he invited Louis Conneau to dine with him. Both lads were very fond of strawberry cream, and the prince, in order to give an agreeable surprise to his playmate, requested that dish to be prepared for the dessert.

During the morning the two boys quarreled, and Louis Conneau returned home. The prince, too proud to show any emotion at his playmate's departure, took his seat at the dinner table and tried to eat. But when the strawberry cream appeared his self-control gave way. The tears rolled down his cheeks, as he said to a servant:

"Take the cream to Conneau, and tell him I haven't the heart to eat it without him!"—Youth's Companion.

The Chinese Silk Festival.

We, who are always grateful to our benefactors, honor the inventor of the art of silk culture with a perpetual cult. Besides the temples which we have erected in all the corners of the empire, her majesty the empress goes every year at the hatching season, in person, with all her suite, and in great pomp, to the field of the mulberry, to sacrifice to the goddess who was the queen of the Emperor Hoang-Ti. After the ceremony at the temple, her majesty, followed by her ladies, goes into the field, and, surrounded by the farmers' wives, cooks some mulberry leaves and lays them on a basket containing the newly hatched worms. The festival is closed with her winding a cocoon by way of setting an example, in the presence of the people, and distributing gifts to those persons who have been reported by the authorities of their villages as most worthy by reason of their fidelity in attention to the care of the silk worms.

This ceremony, which is one of the most important of those her majesty has to perform during the year, is a great incentive to the silk raising population, who cannot neglect their own work when they see their sovereign occupied in the same way. An old proverb says that "an idle farmer causes two persons to die of hunger, and a woman who will not weave will see ten dying of cold." The proverb illustrates the value of encouragement, and shows that silk worm raising and weaving are arts of the women—"Chinese Silk Lore," by Gen. Teleng-Ki-Tong in Popular Science Monthly.

A Reminiscence.

In the state archives at Albany is a bill of expenses incurred by Abraham Lincoln in Albany while on his way to Washington to be inaugurated as president of the United States, which shows that at least his suite were very patriotic if not demonstrative in their celebration of Washington's birthday.

The bill was as follows:

Dickens House, Albany, Feb. 22, 1861.

BY FAR THE MOST POWERFUL ALTERNATIVE IS Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old are alike benefited by its use. For the eruptive diseases peculiar to children nothing else is so effective as this medicine, while its agreeable flavor makes it easy to administer.

"My little boy had large scrofulous ulcers on his neck and throat from which he suffered terribly. Two physicians attended him, but he grew continually worse under their care, and everybody expected he would die. I had heard of the remarkable cures effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and tried it. Shortly after he began to take this medicine, the ulcers commenced healing, and, after using several bottles, he was entirely cured. He is now as healthy and strong as any boy age." —William F. Dougherty, Hampton, Va.

"In May last, my youngest child, fourteen months old, began to have sore gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies, but the sore increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sore continued to multiply until in a few months they covered almost the whole body. At last we began to use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the ulcerations were gradually removed, and the child was soon as well as ever. The child is livelier, its skin is freer, and its appetite better than we have observed for months." —Frank M. Griffin, Long Point, Texas.

"The formula of Ayer's Sarsaparilla presents for chronic diseases of all kinds a remedy which is unknown to every kindred remedy known to the medical world." —D. M. Wilson, M. D., Wiggins, Arkansas.
